

James Marx is well known as infection preventionist, especially in long-term care facilities. He received a Bachelor of Science degree from Wagner College in Staten Island, New York with a Major in Nursing and Minors in Chemistry and Biology. He completed his Master of Science degree in Preventive Medicine from The Ohio State University. Jim is now pursuing a PhD in Public Health at Walden University.

In 1991 he founded Broad Street Solutions, a San Diego based infection prevention and control consulting business. Jim has written and co-author several articles on infection control including the APIC long term care guideline, APIC surveillance guideline and the APIC elimination guides for prevention of catheter related urinary tract infection and the MRSA elimination guide-California supplement.

He is a registered nurse, a licensed nursing home administrator, and maintains certification in both nursing administration and infection prevention and control.